'Political developments in Bolivia: their impact on indigenous people and environment'

by Ricardo Calla

Ricardo Calla, anthropologist and former Minister of Indigenous Affairs in Bolivia, has a long history of working with indigenous people in the Andes. Indigenous people form a majority of the Bolivian population and therefore, possess significant political power. However, economic power is still in the hands of an oligarchy. Ricardo Calla will give his view on contemporary politics and their impact on indigenous people and environment in Bolivia.
